

EUROPEAN COURT OF HUMAN RIGHTS
COUR EUROPÉENNE DES DROITS DE L'HOMME

Communicated on 28 August 2014

FIRST SECTION

Application no. 11421/13
Khamid Khatutovich KABARDOKOV and others against Russia and 33 other applications
(see list appended)

STATEMENT OF FACTS

The applicants are 223 Russian nationals listed in Appendix 1. They live in various towns of the Republic of Kabardino-Balkaria.

The facts of the case, as submitted by the applicants, may be summarised as follows.

A. The circumstances of the case

The applicants were clean-up workers at the site of the Chernobyl nuclear plant accident. As a result they suffered from extensive exposure to radioactive emissions which later led to their disability.

In late 2010 the applicants lodged a complaint with the Nalchik Town Court of the Republic of Kabardino-Balkaria (“the Town Court”) against the Russian Ministry of Finance seeking compensation of non-pecuniary damage in the above connection.

In the period between January and April 2011 (see Appendix 2, column no. 2) the Town Court allowed the applicants’ claims in part and awarded the applicants compensations between 1,200,000 - 1,600,000 Russian roubles (approximately 25,000 - 33,000 euros) (see Appendix 3).

The judgments above have not been appealed against and became final and enforceable.

In the period between June and November 2011 the Department of the Federal Treasury Fund in the Republic of Kabardino-Balkaria (“the FTF”) on behalf of the Russian Ministry of Finance lodged an appeal with the Supreme Court of the Republic of Kabardino-Balkaria (“the Supreme Court of Kabardino-Balkaria”) against the final judgments in the applicants’ favour through the Town Court (Appendix 2, column no. 2). They also requested that the statutory ten-day time-limit for lodging such an appeal against the judgments be restored.

In the same period (Appendix 2, column no. 3) the Town Court refused to restore the time-limit for appealing against the main judgments, stating that the FTF provided no valid reasons for missing it. The latter decisions were not appealed against and became final.

Meantime some of the applicants received the awarded compensations while the others were waiting (see Appendix 3).

In the period between July and November 2012 the FTF lodged an appeal with the Town Court against the previous refusals (Appendix 2, column no. 3). They also requested that the ten-day statutory time-limit for appealing against those decisions be restored on the grounds that their copies had not been forwarded to the FTF.

In the same period (Appendix 2, column no. 4) the Town Court ordered that the time-limit for appeal be extended on the grounds that there was no evidence that the FTF had received refusals in due course.

In the period between July and November 2012 the applicants appealed against the latter decisions before the Supreme Court of Kabardino-Balkaria on the grounds that according to the domestic law the court should forward a copy of its decision only to those parties, which were not present at the court hearings. However, according to the applicants, since the FTF’s representative participated in the proceedings, the court was not required to forward them a copy of the decision.

In the period between August and December 2012 (Appendix 2, column no. 4) the Supreme Court of Kabardino-Balkaria found that the Town Court lawfully extended the time-limits for appeals but held that the grounds for the extensions were incorrect. The Supreme Court of Kabardino-Balkaria in particular held that the Russian Ministry of Finance could not be said to have been duly represented in those proceedings as the transcript of a hearing did not provide the details regarding the power of attorney of Ms B., who had acted as a representative of the Russian Ministry of Finance. In such circumstances the Town Court should have forwarded a copy of the decision to the defendant but had failed to do so. Accordingly, the Supreme Court held that the Russian Ministry of Finance had valid excuse in missing the statutory time-limit for appealing against the Town Court’s decisions taken between June and November 2011 (Appendix 2, column no. 3).

In the period between September 2012 and February 2013 (Appendix 2, column no. 5) the Supreme Court of Kabardino-Balkaria quashed the Town Court’s refusals (Appendix 2, column no. 3) and restored the time-limit for appealing against the main judgments (Appendix 2, column no. 2). It noted, in particular, as follows:

“... As it transpires from the case materials the defendant [the Russian Ministry of Finance] was represented by Ms B. ... who participated in the first instance court hearing on examination of the case on the merits and, accordingly, was aware of the delivered judgment [Town Court’s judgment in the applicants’ favour].

Therefore submission of an appeal against that judgment [Town Court] within the time-limit provided by Article 338 of the Russian Code of Civil Procedure depended on the representative’s good faith ... Accordingly, failure to comply with the time-limit by the defendant evidently was a consequence of improper fulfillment of the obligations by the representative, which obviously led to substantial violation of the Russian Federation’s rights in supporting its position before the court of appeal.”

In the period between September 2012 and March 2013 (Appendix 2, column no. 6) the Supreme Court of Kabardino-Balkaria quashed the Town Court’s main judgment and dismissed the applicants’ claims in full. It noted that the domestic law concerning compensation for non-pecuniary damage had been introduced on 31 May 1991 after the Chernobyl nuclear accident had occurred, therefore the applicants were not entitled to any compensation. The Supreme Court further ordered the applicants to return the money they had received pursuant to the Town Court’s judgments taken between January and April 2011 (Appendix 2, column no. 2).

Three applicants, Mr Kolomiyets (applicant no. 67), Mr Lepekhin (applicant no. 78) and Mr Apanasenko (applicant no. 101) died on 30 and 26 March and 23 July 2013 respectively, after they filed their applications with the Court. By letter of 17 April 2014 the applicants’ wives informed the Court about their husbands’ decease and expressed the intention to continue proceedings.

B. Relevant domestic law and practice

Article 112 of the Russian Code of Civil Procedure (“CCP”) provides that a competent court may extend a time-limit for procedural actions, such as lodging an appeal, if the court finds that a party has a valid excuse for a failure to comply with that time-limit.

Article 227 of the CCP stipulates that a copy of a decision concerning termination of proceedings shall be forwarded to the parties to the proceedings if they were not present at the hearing within three days after its delivery.

Under Article 338 of the CCP, in force before 1 January 2012, an appeal in a civil case could be lodged within ten days after the delivery of a first-instance judgment in its final form. After 1 January 2012 the time-limit for lodging an appeal has been extended to one month under Article 321 of the CCP.

Under Article 392 of the CCP a final judgment in a case may be reviewed, inter alia, on the ground that the European Court of Human Rights found a violation of the Convention on account of the domestic judicial proceedings or decisions taken in that case. Articles 393-94 set out a procedure for reopening of domestic judicial proceedings in any such case.

Article 1109 § 3 of the CCP stipulates that, if a decision to grant compensations for damages to health to a person in the absence of a bad faith and miscalculations on his or her part is quashed on appeal or by way of supervisory review, the compensation itself cannot be claimed back.

COMPLAINTS

The applicants complain under Article 6 § 1 of the Convention that restoration of the time-limit for an appeal resulting in quashing of the final judgment in their favour violated the principle of legal certainty. The applicants further complain under Article 1 of Protocol No. 1 of the Convention that reversal of the compensations awarded by the Town Court, which had already been paid to some of the applicants, violated their right to property.

QUESTIONS TO THE PARTIES

1. Regard being had to the decisions listed in columns nos. 5 and 6 of Appendix 2, by which the Supreme Court of the Republic of Kabardino-Balkaria, at requests of the Russian Ministry of Finance, restored a time-limit for appealing against decisions listed in columns nos. 3 and 2 of Appendix 2 respectively, were the guarantees of Article 6 § 1 of the Convention, and in particular the principle of legal certainty, respected (see Bezrukovy v. Russia, no. 34616/02, §§ 32-36, 10 May 2012)?

2. Have there been any other examples, not stemming from the facts as described in the present case, where a time-limit for an appeal was restored on similar grounds? The Government are invited to submit their reply with references to domestic practice, if any.

3. Did the quashing of the final judgments in the applicants' favour constitute an interference with the applicants' right to the peaceful enjoyment of the possession in the form of the judgment debt? If so, was such interference justified in terms of Article 1 of Protocol No. 1?
