Kılıc v. Austria \(application no. 27700/15\)

The applicants, Selma Kılıc and Mürsel Kılıc, are Turkish nationals who were born in 1975 and 1974 respectively and live in Vienna.

The case concerns the placement of the applicants' children with foster families following their removal from the applicants' care due to allegations of neglect. The domestic courts ruled, ultimately, that returning the children to their parents would put them in danger.

Relying on Article 8 (right to respect for private and family life) and Article 9 (freedom of thought, conscience and religion) of the European Convention on Human Rights, the applicants complain of the refusal to return their children to their care and that the children's placement in foster families did not reflect their religious or ethnic background.

Pařízek v. the Czech Republic \(no. 76286/14\)

The applicant, Josef Pařízek, is a Czech national who was born in 1975 and lives in Olešnice (Czech Republic).

The case concerns the increase of Mr Pařízek's rent on his flat following its sale. He had been living there since 1999 under a rent-control scheme. It also concerns the court proceedings that followed.

Relying on Article 1 of Protocol No. 1 (protection of property) to the European Convention and Article 6 § 1 (right to a fair trial) of the Convention, Mr Pařízek complains, in particular, of the court decisions that led to his rent being increased retroactively, and that the courts did not respond to his arguments concerning the case-law of the Supreme Court in similar cases.

Potoczka and Adamčo v. Slovakia \(no. 7286/16\)

The applicants, Anita Potoczka and Branislav Adamčo, are a couple. They are both Slovak nationals and were born in 1980 and 1978, respectively. Ms Potoczka lives in Veľké Kapušany, while Mr Adamčo is detained in Leopoldov (Slovakia).

The case concerns telephone tapping in 2004 in the context of criminal proceedings for extortion against Mr Adamčo. The tapped mobile phone belonged to Ms Potoczka, but was – according to the authorities – being used by Mr Adamčo.

Relying in particular on Articles 8 (right to respect for private life) and 13 (right to an effective remedy) of the Convention, the applicants complain that the court warrant authorising the tapping did not give any reasons; nor did it identify the issuing judge or monitor whether there were continued grounds for the tapping. They also allege under Article 6 (right to a fair trial) that the dismissal of their constitutional complaint was unfair as it had been based on the police's observations without giving them the opportunity to comment.

Cömert and Others v. Türkiye (no. 17231/17)

The applicants are six Turkish nationals who were born between 1951 and 1985. They live in Hatay, Türkiye.

The case concerns the death of a relative of the applicants, Abdullah Cömert, from a head wound caused by a tear-gas grenade fired by a member of the security forces during a demonstration held in Hatay in June 2013 to protest against the demolition of Gezi Park, one of central Istanbul's few green spaces.

Relying on Article 2 (right to life) of the Convention, the applicants complain of the death of their relative. Relying on Articles 6 (right to a fair hearing) and 13 (right to an effective remedy), they argue that the persons actually responsible for his death have not been held liable.

Ovcharenko and Kolos v. Ukraine (nos. 27276/15 and 33692/15)

The applicants, Vyacheslav Ovcharenko and Mykhaylo Kolos, are two Ukrainian nationals who were born in 1957 and 1953 respectively.

In 2006 they were appointed as judges of the Constitutional Court of Ukraine. The case concerns their dismissal as judges from that Court for their participation in a judgment, which the authorities interpreted as an unlawful act restoring a previous version of the Constitution which had led to the usurpation of power by the then President of Ukraine.

Relying on Articles 6 (right to a fair hearing), 8 (right to respect for private and family life), and 18 (limitation on use of restrictions on rights) of the Convention, they complain that their dismissal was unjustified and allege that there was an ulterior motive behind it.

The Court will give its rulings in writing on the following cases, some of which concern issues which have already been submitted to the Court, including excessive length of proceedings.

These rulings can be consulted from the day of their delivery on the Court's online database HUDOC.

They will not appear in the press release issued on that day.
